CHILDREN LAW UPDATE

This summer's now standard children law update is going to attempt to give you a reasonably thorough summary of all the key stuff you need to know from the ever-expanding amount of published law. I am going to do a 'rewind-repeat' and start this update with a topic covered in the last one; intermediaries.

RECENT GENDER DYSPHORIA CASES

Applications concerning medical intervention/treatment for children experiencing gender dysphoria remains controversial. It is a topic increasingly the subject of private law applications, typically where the child's parents are not in agreement about the prospect of medical intervention and the Court is asked to determine an application to either provide, or prohibit, access to treatment.
